The stated rating is not justified by the reviewed software. Why do you even mention the approval from the software manufacturer? Lightroom is a totally open and free software that is also published by Adobe. There is no need to even mention the manufacturer. It's biased! Maybe you should also mention that Adobe sells courseware too and does not provide a free, open program to its customers, which is more like a deal in the consumer market. BTW I would do this review if this was an article like "Adobe Photoshop Review".
